Supply Community Admiral Stan Arthur Award Winners

VADM R. L. Williamson, Deputy Chief of Naval Operations for Fleet Readiness and Logistics (OPNAV N4), recently announced the winners of the 2022 Admiral Stan Arthur Awards.

This award recognizes both military and civilian logisticians who epitomize excellence in the realm of logistics and sustainment planning and execution, ensuring our delivery of capability and sustainment to the Fleet is hand-in-hand with timely provision of end-to-end logistics and sustainment support, such that Navy Infrastructure and Logistics are best postured to provide persistent support in unpredictable environments.

This year, our Supply community—military and civilian—stood among the best of the best, demonstrating the tremendous work we are doing to advance the Navy mission and innovate across multiple disciplines, including Organization, Training, Material, Leadership, Personnel, Facilities, and Policy.

Winners:

2022 Senior Civilian Logistics and Sustainment Professional of the Year is John A. Courtney, Deputy for Aviation Weapons Support and Operation, Naval Supply Systems Command Weapon Systems Support.

2022 Military Officer Logistics and Sustainment Professional of the Year is Cmdr. John P. Tamez, Director of Maritime Industrial Support, Naval Supply Systems Command Weapon Systems Support.

2022 Logistics and Sustainment Team of the Year is Supply Department, USS KEARSARGE (LHD 3).

2022 Runner-Up Junior Civilian Logistics and Sustainment Professional of the Year runner-up is Megan L. McShane, Logistics Management Specialist, Naval Supply Systems Command Weapon Systems Support.

2022 Runner-Up Enlisted Military Logistics and Sustainment Professional of the Year runner-up is Chief Petty Officer Harrison L. Hartig, Supply Officer, Naval Special Warfare Group TWO.

2022 Runner-Up Logistics and Sustainment Team of the Year runner-up is Naval Sustainment System Supply Team, Naval Supply Systems Command.

These awardees exemplify the importance of logistics to achieving the Navy's mission and innovating across leadership, personnel, doctrine, organization, training, material, and facilities to advance our competitive edge over our adversaries.

The far-reaching importance of logistics is evident in today's contested environments; more than ever, logistics must be planned and executed by outstanding leaders like these. Bravo Zulu!
